

FIELD-TESTED, NOT THEORETICAL

12 Marketing Prompts That Actually Work.

Built from years of running real campaigns. Every prompt includes a real small-business example, not just a template.

PROMPTS

Four categories. Twelve prompts, twelve real examples.

Every prompt has a reusable template and a real filled-in example from an actual small business, so you can see exactly how to adapt it to yours.

01 Copy the template

Paste it into Claude, ChatGPT, or whichever tool you use.

02 Check the real example

See exactly how someone else filled in the same brackets.

03 Adapt, don't just copy

Swap in your real numbers, audience, and voice.

01 Strategy & Positioning

● ● ● Competitor Positioning Map

01

TEMPLATE

Here are three competitors in [your industry]: [names or descriptions]. For each one, identify their core promise, their weakest point, and the one thing they never talk about. Then suggest a positioning angle for my business that sits in the gap they've left open.

REAL EXAMPLE: HAIR SALON

Here are three competitors in my local hairdressing market: a big chain salon two doors down, an independent stylist who only does colour, and a mobile hairdresser who visits clients at home. For each one, identify their core promise, their weakest point, and the one thing they never talk about. Then suggest a positioning angle for my business that sits in the gap they've left open.

Use this before writing any new copy. It stops you sounding like everyone else in your category.

● ● ● Customer Persona Builder

02

TEMPLATE

Here are [5-10] real customer questions, support tickets, or reviews: [paste them]. Group them into 2-3 distinct buyer types. For each type, write their main goal, their biggest hesitation before buying, and the exact words they use to describe their problem.

REAL EXAMPLE: VETERINARY CLINIC

Here are 8 real reviews and enquiry messages from my veterinary clinic: [paste them]. Group them into 2-3 distinct pet-owner types. For each type, write their main goal, their biggest hesitation before booking, and the exact words they use to describe their worry, for example 'scared it's serious' or 'just want reassurance'.

Works far better than a generic persona template, because it's built from what people actually said.

TEMPLATE

My current value proposition is: [paste it]. Rewrite it five different ways, each one leading with a different benefit: time saved, money saved, risk removed, status gained, effort removed. Keep each version under 15 words.

REAL EXAMPLE: PHYSIOTHERAPIST

My current value proposition is: 'Physiotherapy for sports injuries and back pain, same-week appointments.' Rewrite it five different ways, each one leading with a different benefit: time saved, money saved, risk removed, status gained, effort removed. Keep each version under 15 words.

Use this when a headline feels flat but you can't pinpoint why.

02 Content & Copy

● ● ● Blog Post Outline From One Idea

04

TEMPLATE

I want to write about [topic] for an audience of [audience]. Give me a headline, three possible angles, and a full outline for the strongest one, with a one-line reason for each section.

REAL EXAMPLE: LIFE COACH

I want to write about how to set boundaries with a difficult family member, for an audience of people who feel guilty saying no. Give me a headline, three possible angles, and a full outline for the strongest one, with a one-line reason for each section.

Turns a vague idea into a structure you can actually write from in ten minutes.

● ● ● Email Subject Line Generator

05

TEMPLATE

Write 8 subject lines for an email about [topic/offer]. For each one, note which psychological trigger it's using: curiosity, urgency, specificity, social proof, or self-interest. Flag the two you'd test against each other first, and why.

REAL EXAMPLE: OPTICIAN

Write 8 subject lines for an email about back-to-school eye exams and 10% off frames this month. For each one, note which psychological trigger it's using: curiosity, urgency, specificity, social proof, or self-interest. Flag the two you'd test against each other first, and why.

The reasoning is the part people miss. It turns guessing into a repeatable skill.

TEMPLATE

Here is a sample of our brand voice: [paste 2-3 examples]. Now review this new piece of copy: [paste it]. Flag anywhere it drifts from that voice, and rewrite those specific lines to match.

REAL EXAMPLE: YOGA STUDIO

Here is a sample of our brand voice, calm and unhurried, from our class descriptions: [paste 2-3 examples]. Now review this new piece of copy for our new-members flyer: [paste it]. Flag anywhere it drifts from that voice, and rewrite those specific lines to match.

Keeps a growing content library consistent, even with more than one person writing.

03 Campaigns & Ads

● ● ● Ad Angle Generator

07

TEMPLATE

My product is [description]. My audience is [audience]. Give me 6 completely different ad angles: one problem-led, one story-led, one comparison-led, one data-led, one objection-led, and one identity-led.

REAL EXAMPLE: DENTAL CLINIC

My product is a teeth whitening treatment, results in one visit. My audience is professionals aged 30-50 who are self-conscious in photos and meetings. Give me 6 completely different ad angles: one problem-led, one story-led, one comparison-led, one data-led, one objection-led, and one identity-led.

Stops you running five ads that are secretly the same ad.

● ● ● Landing Page Copy First Draft

08

TEMPLATE

Write landing page copy for [offer], targeting [audience]. Structure: headline, subheadline, three benefit blocks with a one-line proof point each, one objection handled directly, and a closing call to action. Tone: [your tone].

REAL EXAMPLE: PERSONAL TRAINER

Write landing page copy for a 6-week strength training programme, targeting people over 40 who haven't exercised regularly in years. Structure: headline, subheadline, three benefit blocks with a one-line proof point each, one objection handled directly (fear of injury or looking out of place), and a closing call to action. Tone: encouraging, not intimidating.

A genuinely useful first draft, not a finished page. Treat it as the block you edit from.

TEMPLATE

Here's what we ran and what happened: [paste results, even rough numbers]. Tell me what likely worked, what likely didn't, and one specific thing to test differently next time. Be honest, don't just tell me it went well.

REAL EXAMPLE: REAL ESTATE AGENT

Here's what we ran: a Facebook ad for a first-time-buyer open house, 60 people saw it, 4 messaged for details, 1 attended. Tell me what likely worked, what likely didn't, and one specific thing to test differently next time. Be honest, don't just tell me it went well.

The "be honest" line matters. Without it, most models default to praise instead of analysis.

04 Growth & Optimisation

● ● ● Content Repurposing Plan

10

TEMPLATE

Here's a piece of long-form content: [paste or describe it]. Give me 5 ways to repurpose it: a short social post, an email, a carousel outline, a one-line quote graphic, and a deeper follow-up on one sub-point.

REAL EXAMPLE: PET GROOMER

Here's a piece of long-form content: a step-by-step guide on brushing a long-haired dog at home between grooming visits. Give me 5 ways to repurpose it: a short social post, an email, a carousel outline, a one-line quote graphic, and a deeper follow-up on one sub-point.

One good piece of content should never live in only one place.

● ● ● SEO Content Gap Finder

11

TEMPLATE

Here are the top 5 pages currently ranking for [keyword or topic]: [paste titles/summaries]. What are they all missing that a searcher would still want to know? Give me 3 content ideas that fill that gap.

REAL EXAMPLE: ACCOUNTANT / BOOKKEEPER

Here are the top 5 pages currently ranking for 'self-employed tax return checklist': [paste titles/summaries]. What are they all missing that someone doing their return for the first time would still want to know? Give me 3 content ideas that fill that gap.

Better than keyword stuffing. It finds the actual gap in what's already ranking.

TEMPLATE

Here's this week's activity: [paste rough notes, numbers, or campaign names]. Summarise what moved the needle, what didn't, and draft three bullet points I could bring to a Monday planning meeting.

REAL EXAMPLE: ANY SMALL BUSINESS

Here's this week's activity: posted 3 times on Instagram, ran a 2-day sale, got 5 new enquiries and 2 bookings. Summarise what moved the needle, what didn't, and draft three bullet points I could bring to a Monday planning meeting.

Turns a messy week into a five-minute prep job instead of an hour of scrolling back through everything.
